

George Phillips Jr.

RECOVERY COMMUNITY CENTER

MISSION

To provide support services to all people, their families and friends who seek to sustain recovery from substance use disorder.

VISION

We envision a world in which people are able to seek recovery from substance use disorder free from stigma in an environment rich in support services.

GOAL

To help all who seek to recover from substance use disorder the opportunity to thrive, not just survive!

OVERVIEW

The George Phillips Jr. Recovery Community Center is a recovery-oriented sanctuary anchored in the heart of Anne Arundel County. The GPJRCC provides peer-based recovery support services using a volunteer force to deliver a vast majority of these services. The center assists anyone in their recovery journey no matter where they are in their process. Ultimately, this is a place to find workshops, training and educational sessions to enhance one's own recovery.

George Phillips Jr.

George Phillips Jr. believed in people when they didn't believe in themselves. A true champion of recovery, he knew that recovery from substance use disorder was possible and worked tirelessly for all who suffered with addiction. He achieved worldwide success as a singer, songwriter, and musician, but helping people was his true passion. As a part of his decades-long career in behavioral health, George established the Recovery Oriented Systems of Care (ROSC), known today as Recovery Anne Arundel. Given his countless contributions to the recovery community in Anne Arundel County, naming the Recovery Community Center in his memory is a fitting tribute to George.
